PERSONALITY STYLE

AND

IMPACT

JUNG'S THEORY OF PERSONALITY TYPES

Carl Jung spent 10 years of his life developing his theory of personality types. Jung felt that much of what was considered totally random human behavior was actually quite orderly and consistent. Many of the differences in human behavior were seen as a result of the individual's personality type.

These basic differences concern the way people prefer to use their minds, specifically the way they use perception and judgment.

"Perception" includes the processes of becoming aware of things or people or occurrences or ideas;

"Judgment" includes the processes of coming to conclusions about that which has been perceived.

Together, perception and judgment constitute a large portion of the individual's total mental activity. They also govern a large portion of one's outer behavior. By definition, an individual's perception determines what he sees in a situation and his judgment determines what he decides to do about it.

Thus, behavior is directly affected by the process of perception and judgment.

WHAT ONE PERCEIVES:	Extroverted	Introverted
* HOW ONE PERCEIVES:	Sensing	Intuition
* HOW JUDGMENTS ARE MADE:	Feeling	Thinking
WHETHER "OPEN" OR "CLOSED" TO ADDITIONAL INFORMATION:	Perceptive	Judgment

*The basic preferences of perception (S or N) and making judgments (F or T) produce the four possible combinations, each having a particular personality with characteristics that are the natural and necessary result of the way they perceive and the way they judge. These different personalities express important differences among people, and one can probably find each of them among his own acquaintances: Analytical, logical and practical; Amiable, social and gregarious; Persuasive, enthusiastic and insightful; Assertive, intellectually ingenious and determined.

If a person tries to sort his acquaintances into these four categories according to their preferred combination of perception and judgment, he will find some of them much easier to place than others. Of two Amiable people, one may show his preference for sensing and feeling in nearly everything he does or says. The other may give few clues to go on. His preferences may be just as strong, his sensing and feeling just as well developed. But, they do not show to the same degree because of the way he chooses to develop them.

ANALYTICAL SENSING TYPES AMIABLE

INTROVERTS PERCEPTIVE	ISTJ Serious, quiet, earn success by concentration and thoroughness. Practical, orderly, matter-of-fact, logical, realistic and dependable. See to it that everything is well organized. Take responsibility. Make up their own minds as to what should be accomplished and work toward it steadily, regardless of protests or distractions. Live their outer life more with thinking, inner more with sensing.	ISFJ Oulet, friendly, responsible and conscientious. Work devotedly to meet their obligations and serve their friends. Thorough, painstaking, accurate. May need time to master technical subjects, as their interests are not often technical. Patient with detail and routine. Loyal, considerate, concerned with how other people feel. Live their outer life more with feeling, inner more with sensing.
	ISTP Cool onlookers, quiet, reserved, observing and analyzing life with detached curiosity and unexpected flashes of original humor. Usually interested in impersonal principles, cause and effect, or how and why mechanical things work. Exert themselves no more than they think necessary, because any waste of energy would be inefficient. Live their outer life more with sensing, inner more with thinking.	ISFP Retiring, quietly friendly, sensitive, modest about their abilities. Shun disagreements, do not force their opinions or values on others. Usually do not care to lead but are often loyal followers. May be rather relaxed about assignments or getting things done, because they enjoy the present moment and do not want to spoil it by undue haste or exertion. Live their outer life more with sensing, inner more with feeling.
EXTRAVERTS PERCEPTIVE	ESTP Matter-of-fact, do not worry or hurry, enjoy whatever comes along. Tend to like mechanical things and sports, with friends on the side. May be a bit blunt or insensitive. Can do math or science when they see the need. Dislike long explanations. Are best with real things that can be worked, handled, taken apart or put back together. Live their outer life more with sensing, inner more with thinking.	ESFP Outgoing, easygoing, accepting, friendly, fond of a good time. Like sports and making things. Know what's going on and join in eagerly. Find remembering facts easier than mastering theories. Are best in situations that need sound common sense and practical ability with people as well as with things. Live their outer life more with sensing, inner more with feeling.
	ESTJ Practical realists, matter-of-fact, with a natural head for business or mechanics. Not interested in subjects they see no use for, but can apply themselves when necessary. Like to organize and run activities. Tend to run things well, especially if they remember to consider other people's feelings and points of view when making their decisions. Live their outer life more with thinking, inner more with sensing.	ESFJ Warm-hearted, talkative, popular, conscientious, born cooperators, active committee members. Always doing something nice for someone. Work best with plenty of encouragement and praise. Little interest in abstract thinking or technical subjects. Main interest is in things that directly and visibly affect people's lives. Live their outer life more with feeling, inner more with sensing.

If the description of your reported type makes you feel comfortably understood, your four letters are probably right. If it does not fit you, one or more of the letters may be wrong. Sometimes people are not sure what they do prefer, or they disown their real preference for fear they ought to prefer

ASSERTIVES - TAKE TIME TO LISTEN

As an Assertive your strengths lie in being independent, self-motivated, quick to act, and task oriented. Because you are competitive and feel a need to be in charge of situations, you often fail to listen effectively to your teammate's feelings, opinions and needs. Since others often resent being pushed into decisions without feeling they have been "heard," you need to learn how to listen.

The following are recommended actions:

- Allow others time to ask questions and encourage them to do so.
- Listen to objections, without reacting negatively. Acknowledge divergent points of view without making the other person "wrong".
- Avoid overwhelming others with your facts and figures, your intelligence or your need to have the last word.
- When answering negative questions reinforce the other person for being concerned about an issue and then go on to show how the benefits of the proposal offset their concern.
- Listen so you can incorporate the other's ideas into your statements and recognize their contribution frequently.
- Give more emotional support by displaying a concern for the tension the other person may be experiencing.
- Convey enthusiasm and a sense of involvement in the relationship.
- Show your feelings and talk personally with others about their needs and ideas.
- Develop a system that will remind others of your interest in them; i.e., periodic memos, phone calls, little gifts or favors. This is especially important at times when you do not have a business need to contact them.
- Think of someone you have rubbed the wrong way. Buy them a cup of coffee, ask for their perspective and listen without defending yourself.

PERSUASIVES - PAUSE AND REFLECT

As a Persuasive, your strengths lie in your enthusiasm, your people-orientation, your ability to make decisions quickly, and your stimulating competitive desire for attention. Because of the latter, you may not be good at perception-checking, i.e., considering the points of view of others and the feelings involved in the decision making process. Thus, to grow you need to pause and reflect upon what others are experiencing.

The following are some recommended actions:

- Focus your attention on the wants, needs and problems of the other person, rather than centering the interaction on yourself.
- Admit that you don't know all the answers and that you aren't always right.
- Pause, analyze and delay your response since you often project impatience.
- Avoid overwhelming others with your ideas and expertise.
- Allow time for others to ask questions.
- Acknowledge and incorporate the other person's perspective and ideas into your presentation.
- Develop a cooperative, rather than competitive relationship with others.
- Present factual information in a logical way, thereby toning down your emotional appeals.
- Limit the extent to which you take others into confidence.
- Keep records of things important to you; write up a realistic workplan and follow it.
- Talk more slowly, more quietly, and less.
- Become more organized by keeping up to date with reports and cleaning your desk of extraneous materials.
